Chiselwood only UK finalist in global design competition

CHISELWOOD is the only company from the UK to reach the finals of the World Kitchen Design Contest.

The Saxilby-based designers and makers of premium kitchens is led by husband and wife team Mel and Martin Holliday who are 'immensely proud' their design was chosen from 1,500 worldwide in the competition run by Sub-Zero and Wolf.

Design director Martin (pictured) had created the successful entry, The Rectory, for the owners of an early Victorian listed building. This was selected as one of 25 finalists by a panel of seven renowned architects, kitchen and interior designers after four days of deliberation at the headquarters of the leading refrigeration and kitchen supply company in Wisconsin in the United States.

"Receiving recognition from an iconic brand such as Sub Zero/Wolf that enjoys a strong relationship with the design community is an outstanding achievement for the entire team here at Chiselwood," said managing director Mel, who submitted the company's entry.
